ACT I

Consul Crassus returns to Rome in triumph from his latest conquests. Spartacus and his wife Phrygia are among the captives reduced to slavery. As Phrygia is sent to the harem kept by Crassus, Spartacus is sent into the gladiatorial ring and forced to kill his fellowman. Horrified, Spartacus incites his fellow captives to rebellion.

ACT II

At the head of the uprising, Spartacus calls the crowds to join the rebels. However, knowing his wife is still enslaved, he cannot find peace. With his men, he bursts in the middle of Crassus's festivities and challenges him in single combat.

ACT III

Humiliated, Crassus gathers his legions to take revenge. While his concubine Aegina introduces herself into the rebel camp to sow discord, Crassus's army besieges Spartacus's camp...
